

CRI389Y0 – RIGHTS, FREEDOMS AND RESPONSIBILITIES IN CRIMINAL LAW:
HISTORICAL ORIGINS AND NEW DIRECTIONS IN ENGLAND AND CANADA
SUMMER 2024 - DRAFT

GENERAL DESCRIPTION

This course traces shifts in the rights, freedoms and responsibilities of legal subjects, as they have been defined in criminal law in England and Canada, beginning with the gradual emergence of the common law in England during the Medieval period, right up to the present day, including the history of approaches to political violence in England. Close attention will be paid to recent developments which challenge traditional doctrines. The English legal system has recently adopted a number of innovations and proposals which have not been tried in Canada, including new doctrines regarding police administration, antisocial behaviour, community policing, speech supporting terrorism, and jury trials. In all these cases, there is significant modification of established legal doctrines regarding the relationship between the state and its subjects. The new Conservative government has modified some of these policies, partly in light of fiscal challenges. Canada has been at the forefront of other developments which modify that relationship, most notably regarding dangerousness assessment with a view to preventive detention, and the punishment of women offenders, where feminist theories have been influential.

Students will have the opportunity to evaluate these developments in light of the history of legal rights, freedoms and responsibilities in the common law tradition. They will present their views of the nature, causes and validity of the developments in the written assignments.

The course will be of special interest to students of Criminology, Political Science and History.

COURSE READINGS

The lectures and the student evaluations will be based on readings placed on the course Quercus site. Access to library resources will likely be limited during the course, but students will have access to University of Toronto's online resources.

EVALUATIONS

Students complete five evaluations:

Pre-course assignment: 200 - 250 word commentary on a crime news item appearing in Canada, discussing criminal justice system and media response, due Monday 5 August. 5% of course marks.

Test 1 (1 hour): held during Lecture 4, Monday 12 August. Students will answer a question on the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms (see below). 15% of course marks.

Question for Test 1:

Does Canada's Charter of Rights and Freedoms, used to challenge government practice and legislation through judicial review, provide appropriate limits on government?

Response paper: due Thursday 22 August. Students will provide a brief response to an issue raised in our discussions of policing, and the visit by an Oxford City police officer (600-800 words). 15% of course marks.

Test 2 (1 hour): held on the morning of Thursday 29 August. Students will answer one question on either Canadian contributions to feminist thinking on women's corrections or on Robert Hare's influential work on psychopathy (see below). 25% of course marks.

Questions for Test 2:

Topic 1: Feminist criminology of women's corrections. Has the contribution of Canadian feminist research on women's corrections enhanced Canadian correctional services for women?

Topic 2: Psychopathy. Has contemporary research on psychopathy based on Robert Hare's Psychopathy Checklist – Revised (PCL-R) improved Western criminal justice systems?

Short term paper: due Thursday 29 August. Students will complete a 1,250-1500 word paper on one of the topics covered in Lectures 4-10, or another topic approved by Professor Watson: there will be some flexibility to allow students to write about another topic that interests them which can be related to the material in these lectures. All students will meet by appointment with Professor Watson during special office hours held on Monday 12 August, Tuesday 13 August, Wednesday 14 August and Thursday 15 August to discuss their choice of essay topic. They will have the opportunity to discuss the progress of their paper during the office hours held after this. 40% of course marks.

TIMETABLE

Please note, we are fitting in visits from guest speakers; Oxford Community Police, two academics and possibly an ex-student from the U of T Criminology and Sociolegal Studies program. I have placed the visits on the timetable at the same times as they occurred last year: as you will see, on the days when we have guest speakers, we ensure the classes fit in with guest speakers' visits, so that lecture times, office hours or appointments are moved on these days. The dates of these visits for 2024 may be different from those in this draft outline, but this will not affect the two Visits to London or the free days.
